

1830 th 61. Alpha Kingsley Burnham

Died on the morning of Tuesday, the 22nd ^{mo}, ult., in the village of Chester, Vt, Mr. Alpha K. Burnham, formerly one of the preceptors of the Academy at Bennington, Mr.
Burnham had long been suffering with disease of the liver. . . . Like other young men of enterprise and zeal, to aim at the height of excellence on their scholastic pursuits, he was ambitious and resolute; and left the city (Droy) with a view only of regaining his health to prosecute his studies with more advantage at the residence of his parents, near Hanover. When he reached Chester, on Sunday last, he there met Dr. Cook, of Albany, and at his suggestion remained at Chester where he died the following day, a victim, no doubt, to genius, and a desire to excel his professional competitors.
Chester Vt., Oct. 27, 1833, -- Communicated.
The Droy Budget, Nov. 1, 1833,

1830

ALPHA KINGSLEY BURNHAM.

Died on the morning of Tuesday, the 22d ult., in the village of Chester, Vt., Mr. Alpha K. Burnham, formerly one of the preceptors of the Academy at Bennington.

In recording the death of this gentleman, much may be learned to serve as a salutary lesson for those fond of hastening from a sick chamber much against the dictates of reason, their own interest, and the advice of their medical and other attendants. Mr. Burnham had been long suffering with disease of the Liver--had been attended by his family physician in Troy, and partially recovered. Like other young men of enterprise and zeal, to aim at the height of excellence on their scholastic pursuits, he was ambitious and resolute; and left the city with a view only of regaining his health to prosecute his studies with more advantage at the residence of his parents, near Hanover. When he reached Chester, on Sunday last, he there met Dr. Cooke, of Albany, by whose advice he was determined to be governed, but for which, in all human probability, he might have departed this life while on the very act of travelling in the stage. At his suggestion, he remained at Chester, with a promise to the latter gentleman that he would relinquish his journey until he returned from Boston, whither his professional business called him. In the meantime, Dr. Cooke, whose correct opinions have long elevated him to the pinnacle of celebrity, urged him to follow all the course of treatment prescribed by a physician at Chester, under whose care he was left at Chester, where he died on the following day, a victim, no doubt, to genius, and a desire to excell his professional competitors.--Chester, Vt., October 27, 1833. --Communicated.

The Troy Budget
November 1, 1833.

ALPHA K. BURNHAM, 1830, of Westbrook, Maine, was a member of the Philomathean Society.
Philomathean Catalogue 1830 (Died: 1833)

1830

Alpha Kingsley Burnham

Residence given as Westbrook, Cumberland Co., Maine.
1830 Senior Class catalogue.

ALPHA KINGSLEY BURNHAM, B.A., '30, Ø. B. K.

Littleton, N. H. Student, Union College, 1830; law student, Lansingburg, N. Y.
1830-'31. Editor "The Troy (N. Y.) Times," Teacher.
Died, Chester, Vt., October 22, 1833.

From: Kappa Alpha in Union College
1825-1913

61 Alpha Kingsley Burnham, B.A.,
'30; Ø.B.K. Littleton, N. H. Union College, 1830; law student, Lansingburg,
N. Y., 1830-'31. Teacher, Bennington (Vt.) Academy. Editor "The Troy (N.
Y.) Times." Died, Chester, Vt., October 22, 1833.

Kappa Alpha 1941

Alpha Kingsley Burnham A.B.
1830

1830
F. B.
Alpha Kingsley Burnham